Meet & Greet our GOHs

 Main Events

Meet our Guests of Honor! Cyamallo Cyamallo (also known by Scotch) is a furry artist and writer that specializes in 1970s anthropomorphic horror and drawing fursonas with mouths wider than they're physically capable to achieve the LOUDEST SCREAMS! Whether they're painted or flat-colored, everything this chick touches is bound to convey some mess of emotional expression. Like your cartoon animals stretchy? toothy? Broken-boned? If you answered yes, then Cyamallo has got some technicolor creatures for YOU. DeadlyComics Watsup, it's that DeadlyComics guy! I make animations and put 'em online, like COOL TIMES, MOVING RIGHT ALONG?, and that one Fell in Love with a Girl animation with the dancing cat. I'm also an animator on Hazbin Hotel, Ollie & Scoops and Too Loud. Come on down and we can shoot the breeze!

Sketchbook Swap

 Panel Room 3

"Bring your sketchbooks and have em doodled in while you doodle in other peoples sketchbooks! Don't worry if you're not a great artist! This is mostly for fun! Try not to spend too much time on any one doodle, this is very loose and there's no timer to ding and force a swap, but it also is a little unfair to spend the entire panel time on a single persons drawing instead of drawing for multiple people. This panel is going to run long, and continue well into the night, so you will have time at the end to loop back and continue on a piece. Reccomended items for you to bring: - Your sketchbook - Printed out character references! (Badges are fine too) - Drawing materials!"

 4:30pm - 5:30pm

Authenticity and Freedom in Relationship

 Panel Room 2

In this panel, we'll be challenging normative relationship paradigms and exploring better ways to approach various types of connection with others, centered around freedom, authenticity, and respect. Though I'll be speaking from a primarily non-monogamous perspective, the content will be relevant to all relationship dynamics, including non-romantic ones. Topics may include communication, handling feelings and needs, expectations, and personal autonomy.

 4:30pm - 6:30pm

Monster Movies with Pineapple Fox

 Panel Room 1

Hello there! Aside from the furry fandom I have another hobby and that is collecting old 8mm and super 8 film and projectors. Over the years I have collected 100's of film reels, some have sound, some do not. You can think of this as early YouTube almost. I say that because these reels were never big enough to show entire movies. It would only show bits and parts because of the limitation of 10 or so minutes. Some movies would include, The blob, forbidden planet and beware the manbeast just to name a few. I also have some old Disney cartoons as well and those have sound! For this panel I will talk about the technology of the projectors and my hobby around it. I will also want to show some of my collection. I have multiple projectors so i can have continuous play. I ran this panel at ANE and Pinefurcon with a big success. It was advertised pretty well at ANE and they had to stop letting people in the room because there was not more sitting or standing space. All movies are rated G to PG.

 Panel Room 2

"Are you an automotive mechanic? Just a simple car guy? Or just looking to get into cars? Well come and enjoy some spooky automotive tales from anyone with stories to tell. This panel is aimed towards the mechanically inclined furs and was inspired by the automotive furs panel at Anthrocon 2022 that sadly got cancelled as well as the retail furs horror stories panel. It would begin with a brief mixer between whomever showed up early for the panel for the first 10 minutes and transition into anyone who has a story to tell going up to the microphone to share their stories, from sales to repair to simple anecdotes about times you've had to repair your car or had it break down. I'd be having a friend of mine join me to pull up pictures on a screen via a projector in relation to the story."

Cartoons That Have Animals In Them

 Panel Room 1

Now for something you'll really like! In our grim reality, animals don't walk on two legs or speak human words. We have created a solution to this long-smoldering problem: cartoons with animals that walk on two legs and speak human words! Join animators DeadlyComics and Fishyfrog, animator and voice actor Ashley McMike, voice actor and illustrator RagTag, animator and v-tuber Chester the Otter, voice actor and livestreamer JNightlore, and music producer Shadow as we subvert scientific expectations and screen our kooky animal 'toons.

Queering the Monster (18+)

 Panel Room 1

Books, movies, television and comics starring werewolves, vampires, and other monstrosities have captivated audiences throughout the ages. Discuss and learn about the history of queer-coded creatures and their connection to society's vilification of queer people, their impact on the LGBTQ+ community, and how some members of the community are reclaiming them as a statement of victory and empowerment. (Includes a brief discussion of my comic Wanderlust. Would like to open talks about where folks first encountered queer representation, how they connect queerness to monsters and non-human characters including their fursonas, share monster media we love, etc!)

 11:30pm - 12:30am

Roasting the Lamest Summoning Rituals I Could Find on the Internet

 Panel Room 1

Ritual stories are a form of internet creepypasta where instead of a straight story, you're given a set of ominous instructions that you could hypothetically do yourself to summon demons, travel to other worlds, or resurrect the dead. Many of these rituals have the fatal flaw of having no real incentive to try the ritual, and making very little sense.
